...the snow was deep and soft underfoot, and the air was cold but clear. The path led through a line of trees, their branches heavy with snow. The person's breath was visible in the air, and the sound of their boots crunching on the snow was the only sound to be heard. The person walked with a steady gait, their hands tucked into their pockets. The snow was so deep that it almost covered the person's knees. The path was well-trodden, and the person followed it without hesitation. The snow was so white that it almost blinded the person. The person walked for a long time, and the snow was so deep that it almost covered the person's feet. The person walked with a steady gait, their hands tucked into their pockets.
